Sumitra Mishra is the Executive Director of Mobile Creches, a leading organisation, ensuring the voice of most vulnerable young children is central to the policy agenda of governments, businesses and civil society where their areas of work overlaps with rights of children. She has over twenty years of work experience with the most excluded and disenfranchised – persons with disabilities, victims of trafficking, survivors of violence, especially women and children.

Mobile Creches is a fifty year old leading organisation working for the rights of young children (birth to six) to make them a national priority in policies, research, practices, capacities and communities.